

These facilitated discussion guides will give you everything you need to get teens talking about their feelings without asking them the dreaded “How-did-that-make-you-feel” question they all hate. As you develop your talk circle, it usually doesn’t take long for students to get comfortable with the protocol and discover they have much more in common with others in the group than they might have thought. Each discussion has suggested art and drama projects listed as companion projects thematically related. All activity sheets are included.
